The year is 2035. You have been cryogenically frozen for twenty years and brought back to life. The earth has gone through an extinction event and there are very few people left. Those that are around have very high morals, ideals and standards and hold the power to survival. The internet has collapsed and social media is dead. You are required to invent three means of communication to get an audience with one of these creatures. What would you do?

Brief:

Create an identity system for your new self. Invent three items that best communicate your identity. (This could be a drawing, an object or a product. Something that is visible, tangible and relatively stable in form).

Deliverables:

Package your items for presentation. Write a short description of the process, 250 words.
